ABOUT THIS BOOK

We were in the middle of hurricane season and one was brewing off the northern coast.

'Should I be concerned?' I asked the hotel receptionist.

'Of course not,' she replied. 'Fidel is in charge.'

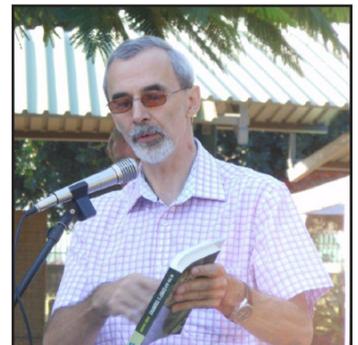

For years, Chris Mclvor moved from one demanding and difficult job to another as a country director for 'Save the Children': Zimbabwe, Mozambique, Egypt, and elsewhere. In this latest book, he charts his experiences in Morocco and Haiti, then in the Cuba that marketing passes by and that tourists don't see. In his journeying he has seen the best and worst of people, and the best and worst of aid in the developing world, but in The World is Elsewhere he also questions his own journey, and why he has lived the way he has, always moving, always solitary.
