

The Actuality

Paul Braddon

Fear makes her human, humans make her fear.

'Not since Philip K. Dick's Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep have I felt so strongly about where artificial intelligence might lead us. Highly recommended.' Christina Dalcher, author of VOX

'Consistently engaging, fast-moving and surprising, The Actuality gives familiar science fiction themes a fresh and compassionate look, and makes of them something new.' Ken MacLeod

ABOUT THIS BOOK

'She belongs to me – property rights would prevail.'

Evie is a near-perfect bioengineered human. In a broken-down future England where her kind has been outlawed, her 'husband' Matthew keeps her safe but hidden. When her existence is revealed, she must take her chances on the dark and hostile streets where more than one predator is on the hunt.

KEY SELLING POINTS

- Film/TV rights have been optioned by the BBC
