

The Wolves of Leninsky Prospekt

Sarah Armstrong

'Sarah Armstrong has delivered a mesmerising, evocative novel in which characterisation and narrative tension are in perfect balance.'

-Barry Forshaw

ABOUT THE BOOK

Lead Fiction, Spring 2019: This thriller brilliantly evokes 1973 Moscow and a world of diplomacy and counter-espionage.

It's 1973 and Martha has been sent down from Cambridge for distributing left-wing leaflets and doing no work. To escape parental disapproval, she marries her friend Kit, posted to Moscow by the diplomatic service. Kit is gay, so having a wife could keep him safe. In Moscow, Martha struggles to make sense of a difficult but fascinating new world. Who can she trust? Who can she even talk to? She takes Russian lessons, makes the wrong friends, becomes familiar with a strange and wonderful city, and unwittingly becomes a spy.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Sarah lives in Essex with her husband and four children. Her short stories have been published in magazines and anthologies, and she teaches creative writing for the Open University. She is also the author of two previous novels published by Sandstone, The Insect Rosary and The Devil in the Snow.

PRAISE FOR THE WOLVES OF LENINSKY PROSPEKT

'A terrific novel of loyalties and love, showing with humour and warmth how a place can get inside you and challenge everything you thought you knew about yourself, and your home.'

-KATHERINE STANSFIELD

'I was as captivated by the story as Martha was with Moscow, waiting for the snow that never quite arrived. A smart, acerbic, thought provoking read.'

-ELIZABETH HAYNES

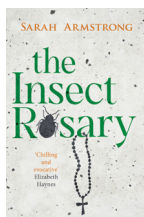

'Armstrong evokes a Moscow that is both magical and oppressive, and has created a young heroine who is foolish, inquisitive and aching lonely.'

-HEATHER RICHARDSON
