

There's Always the Hills

Cameron McNeish

ABOUT THIS BOOK

Cameron McNeish has for almost forty years written and talked about walking and climbing, including great characters such as Chris Brasher, Chris Bonington, and Tom Weir. He has appeared frequently on television, including his own shows, led treks in the Himalayas, edited TGO Magazine, and contributed to The Scots and other magazines. Now, from his home in the Cairngorms, Cameron candidly recalls his full life, much of it in the public eye, much previously unknown.

PRAISE FOR THERE'S ALWAYS THE HILLS

'There's Always the Hills flows like a friendly conversation, shared over three or four single malts, and develops into an engaging tale...'

-The Great Outdoors Magazine

'A vivid travelogue through the breathtaking vistas, towering peaks and rugged islands of Scotland and a tribute to the warmth and hospitality of the Scots people... McNeish's encyclopaedic knowledge of the lochs and glens, Highlands and islands, the bealachs and coires and the myriad myths and legends that reside therein is unrivalled.'

-BBC Countryfile Magazine

'There's Always the Hills is an inspiring story of a life well lived. Or, at least, the first installment.'

-Roger Cox, Scotland on Sunday

'A gifted storyteller, he peels back the layers of his life and offers a personal and emotional look behind the scenes of his success. This is a great read for anyone who enjoys our great outdoors and the wealth of tales that can be told about it - it's both one man's story and a candid, absorbing account for those with an interest in Scotland's awe-inspiring wildlife.'

-Rachel Scorgie, The Courier

'There's Always the Hills is a sure-fire hit. The author's eye for minor details and honest accounts of his experiences, bring his anecdotes to life.'

-Scottish Field

'Cameron McNeish's autobiography is everything we hoped it would be, and a "must buy" for anyone who's ever felt the pull of Scotland's mountains.'

-Undiscovered Scotland

'Cameron is a born raconteur and his book flows easily, being both informative and full of interest.'

-Helen Todd, Walk Magazine
